One of the beroes of the world Fought to conquer, then fought to fall, And fell down slain in his blood-stained mail, And over his form they slept; His cause was lost and his banner farled; And only a waman wept.

One of the singers among mankind Sang healing songs from an o'erwrought heart; But ees men listened the gross and wind Were wasting the rest unsung like a wave; And sow of his fame that will never depart, He has never heard in his grave.

One of the women who only less Loved and grieved and Inded away; Ah mg are these gone to the God above, What more of each can I my ? They are human flowers that flutter and fall, This is the song and the end of them all.

should be its principal food, and not such food

Prof. Comstock, the entomologist of the agricultural department, has been investigating the character and habits of the army worm, and in his forthcoming report sugges s the following remedies: The best means of preventing the occurrence of this pest in chilivated fields will be to keep watch of any extensive tracts of lowands which may be in the neighborhood, and f nemy worms are discovered destroy them. either by burning over the land, if possible, r by poisoning with arsenic, Paris green, or London purple, or by any other means of which the local conditions will admit. In fact, it would be well to burn over all the low In case the worms do appear in oultivated lands the best plan of action to follow is to prevent the spreading of the insect. This may be done by destroying them, or by con-fining them to the fields in which they appear, The best method of destroying them is by crushing with rolling, or by poisoning with arsenic, Paris green, or London purple. Either of these substances can be applied rapidly by mixing with water and using a fountain pump or garden syringe. In many instances, however, these remedies are impracticable. The second line of defense remains, and well carried out, the result will not merely Clothing Department the confining of the worms to the fields in which they appear, but the destruction of them also when they attempt to migrate to other fields. The ditches can be made quite rapidly.
First, plow a furrow with the "land side" next to the field to be protected, and then with First, plow a furrow with the next to the field to be protected, and then with a spade make this side of the furrow vertical, or, if the soil be compact enough to admit of it, overhanging. When the ditch is completed holes should be dug in it from one foot to eighteen inches deep, and from twenty to thirty feet apart. The mides of these holes should also be vertical, or, if possible, overhanging. The worms, unable to climb up the verticle sides of the ditch, will craw along the bottom of it and fall into the holes, where they will soon perish.

Where the soil is sandy, so that the ditch can not be made with a vertical side, it should be dug deeper than in other cases, and the side made as nearly perpendicular as possible, so that when the worms attempt to grawl up to the side in the same cases. the sand will crumble beneath them and cause them to fall back again.

The Use of Lemons.

The lemon is a native of Asia, although it cultivated in Italy, Portugal and in the ath of France. In Europe, however, it selm exceeds the dimensions of the smallest se, while in its native state, it grows to over tree, while in its native state, it grows to over ninety feet in height. Every part of this tree is valuable in medicine, though we ravely employ any of it but its fruit, that is the lemon itself. And every one knows how to employ this, as in lemonade. To squeeze the juice into cold water—this is the shortest way—or to cut it toto slices and then boil it. Either way is good. Lemonade is one of the best and safest drinks for any person, whether in health or not. It is suitable to all stomach diseases, is excellent in sickness—in cases of jaundice, gravel, liver complaint, inflammation of the bowels, and in fevers. It is a specific against worms and skin complaints. The pippins crushel may also be mixed with water and sugar, and be used as a drink Lemon-juice is the best anti-scorbuilt remedy.
